WELCOME TO THE 2006

Madeleine FESTIVAL

The Madeleine Council and the Madeleine Arts and Humanities Program Committee welcome you to the 2006 Madeleine Festival. Founded in 1988 by Monsignor M. Francis Mannion, the festival seeks to revitalize the historic role of cathedrals in the cultural life of their communities: to inspire artistic expression and to make the fruits of that expression available to all. For the past eighteen years the Madeleine Festival has presented an array of arts and humanities events free of charge to the community as a whole. The diversity and caliber of these performances testify to the cultural vitality of the state of Utah, and to the creative energies of its artists. The 2006 Madeleine Festival is pleased to continue this tradition, offering seven evenings of choral and chamber music performances, lectures and exhibitions, tango and chamber folk music.

The Madeleine Council and the Madeleine Program Committee wish to thank the many musicians, artists and lecturers who will take part in this year's festival. We also wish to thank our many patrons, sponsors, friends, and businesses for their generous support. It is their dedication to the arts in Utah that makes the Madeleine Festival possible. We hope that you enjoy this evening's performance and graciously ask that you consider making a contribution to help cover the expense of tonight's performance. Please use the donation envelope provided or visit our website at www.saltlakecathedral.org

blue haiku performs original songs of nature, home, and memory. In Northwestern Trains, a son looks back through time to Chicago, where he used to ride the train to work with his father. In Bold Captain Cannon (based on the 2002 Utah Humanities Council's Governor's Award address of recipient Hal Cannon), our ancestors are a subject of inquiry: "Do we know our fathers? Do we know their songs?" In Coyote Shoes we step through a mysterious moonlit night in Zion National Park – and also explore the sacred space of the cathedral. And in a sneak preview of songs from Red Rock Rondo we hear stories of Springdale and Rockville, Utah collected by the composer.

Storytelling plays an important role in blue haiku's musical portraits, so a brief spoken introduction will explore the origins of each song. blue haiku delights in artistic collaboration and exploration, and is therefore honored to be joined in tonight's concert by two extraordinary musicians and friends, Kate MacLeod and Hal Cannon.

PROGRAM NOTES

Inspired by a concert given by several hundred school children at an English church, Benjamin Britten, the greatest British composer of the 20th century, undertook to write a work in which children would be the principal performers. He chose as his subject the story of Noah and Flood, using for his libretto a medieval version of the story known as the Chester Miracle Play. Miracles plays, performances dramatizing stories from the bible or lives of the saints, were popular throughout Europe in the Middle Ages. Performed by the local townspeople, the productions were mounted on carts and moved from street to street, and from churchyard to market place as part of a cycle or pageant of plays. The Chester Miracle Play, written in the last quarter of the 15th century, follows the biblical account of Noah quite closely. Angry at the wickedness of mankind, God tells Noye (the medieval spelling of Noah) that He will destroy the world. Nove and his family alone will be saved. God commands Noye to build an ark, and to gather two of every creature male and female to repopulate the earth once the rains have ceased and the floodwaters have subsided. Only in the character of Noah's wife does the Chester Miracle Play depart from the familiar biblical story. Barely mentioned in the bible, Mrs. Noye becomes source of much comedy in both the medieval story and in the Britten's drama. A cantankerous and churlish woman, she mocks her husband, preferring the rambunctious company of her friends, the Gossips. Only against her will is she saved from destruction.

Completed in 1957, Britten's Noye's Fludde calls for a large cast of children. They perform the roles of Noye's sons, their wives, the Gossips and all the animals. The Chester Miracle Play listed forty-nine pairs of animals; Benjamin Britten names thirty-five species, but concluded "the more the better." Likewise, the orchestration combines both professional musicians and children. A children's orchestra of strings, recorders, bugles, percussion and hand bells performs with a professional string quintet, a recorder and a percussion player, as well as pianists and an organist. The audience too plays an integral role in the Nove's Fludde. At three pivotal points in the drama the audience joins the performers in singing a hymn. Thus as the production opens the audience joins in singing the hymn, "Lord Jesus think on me." At the height of the drama, as the storm rages and then begins to subside, Noye and his family, the animals and the audience together sing "Eternal Father, strong to save." Finally, as the drama draws to a close, and God makes His covenant with Noye, the audience once again joins the performers in singing, "The spacious firmament on high." Thus, like the medieval miracle play it is based upon, Benjamin Britten's work is not intended a s simply a spectacle to be viewed, but rather an experience to be shared by the community as a whole, where the boundaries between performer and audience are dissolved.

BOB OLPIN: THE DEAN OF Utah Art

A Lecture and Exhibit with Vern Swanson and William Seifrit

TONIGHT'S LECTURE AND EXHIBIT

No single individual has had a more profound influence on the visual arts in Utah than has Robert S. Olpin (1940-2005). Former Dean of the College of Fine Arts and long-time professor of Art History at the University of Utah, Bob Olpin is credited with putting Utah Art on the map. As an educator (both at the University and in his 18-part telecourse, Art Life of Utah) and as an advocate for Utah artists, Professor Olpin shaped the minds and hearts of several generations of artists, connoisseurs, collectors and historians. In tonight's lecture, friends and colleagues Vern Swanson and Bill Seifrit pay tribute to Bob Olpin's legacy. The two will explore Professor Olpin's infectious love of Utah Art, examine the works he prized and recount anecdotes about the artists he befriended.

In conjunction with tonight's lecture, the Cathedral of the Madeleine will exhibit paintings from the Springville Museum of Art as well as from private collections. Spanning more than 150 years of Utah Art History, these images number among Bob Olpin's favorite pieces, and include works by George M. Ottinger, LeConte Stewart, Lee Deffebach, Ed Maryon and Francis Zimbeaux.

A native of southern Oregon, Vern Swanson has been the director of the Springville Museum of Art since 1980. Prior to that appointment he held positions at the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. and at Auburn University in Alabama where he was Assistant Professor of Art History. He has also worked as a sculptor, chasing bronze sculptures for several years at Wasatch Bronze Works. Professor Swanson earned his Bachelor of Arts in painting and drawing from Brigham Young University, his Masters in Art History from the University of Utah and his Doctorate from the Courtauld Institute of Art, University of London. He has published extensively on the Victorian Classicists, including two books on Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, and has written major surveys of Soviet Realist Art. With Bob Olpin and Bill Seifrit, Vern Swanson wrote Utah Art, later revised as Utah Painting and Sculpture, and Utah Art, Utah Artists: 150 Years Survey. Professor Swanson lives in Springville with his wife and two daughters.

Scholar William Seifrit has taught Communications and History in various Eastern colleges and universities. An expert in art of the pioneer period, Professor Seifrit has published extensively in scholarly journals, including the Utah Historical Quarterly. With Bob Olpin and Vern Swanson he wrote the seminal text on the history of the visual arts in Utah, Utah Art, later revised as Utah Painting and Sculpture. The three also coauthored Utah Art, Utah Artists: 150 Years Survey. With Bob Olpin and Vern Swanson he founded the Arts Nurdz, a group of historians, art enthusiasts and collectors who meet regularly to discuss Utah Art.

Madeleine Award Dinner In Honor of Anne Riordan

Market Street Grill-Cottonwood at 6:00 pm

It is difficult for me to write about my feelings because I see myself as a dancer, not as a writer. I move to share my emotions, yet I must put into words what receiving this Madeleine Award means to me. Upon hearing the news, I was astonished by the idea of such a distinguished honor being awarded to me. Could this moment be real? The Madeleine Arts and Humanities Award is such a distinction that it never occurred to me that I would be a recipient.

I was captured by my dream of dance so early in my life, I had never contemplated doing anything else. I could never have imagined the twists and turns that my life's path would take. As fate would have it, I was detoured by the diagnosis of Rheumatoid Arthritis in my mid-twenties. At this juncture, I was forced to reassess my future. But this obstacle, as life's obstacles tend to do, opened a door for me and my journey continued. I was awarded a fellowship at the University of Utah in a new graduate program for Special Education. I expected that I would become a classroom teacher. But as I continued my studies, my mind kept returning to my dream of dance. And I thought to myself, why not dance with this population? So that's what I did. I never would have found this group of people who loved and accepted me unconditionally had this seeming disaster not happened. I was home.

So in following the dance, the journey brought me to this moment-the Madeleine Award. I humbly accept this treasured award and thank you from the deepest part of my heart.

Anne Riordan

Anne Riordan's life in dance has been one of dedicated service, endless invention and profound joy. The 2006 recipient of the Madeleine Award for Distinguished Service to the Arts and Humanities, Anne Riordan was Professor of Dance at the University of Utah for more than 22 years. There she pioneered methods and practices in education for people with mental and physical disabilities, integrating movement exploration in all aspects of learning. Her groundbreaking work became the national model for dance in Special Education. She also founded two performing dance companies, Sunrise Dance Company and Sunrise Wheels, which she directed through the Work Activity Center for Handicapped Adults. The demands of performing radically changed the nature of her work, transforming her work with students from dance as therapy to dance as an art form. Working in partnership with her students, she opened a world of possibilities, for her performers and audiences alike.

A dance major at the University of Utah, Anne Riordan moved to New York City to pursue a career in dance. That career was cut short when she was diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis. Returning to Salt Lake City, she earned her graduate degree in Special Education from the University of Utah. After several years in the Granite School District, Anne Riordan joined the Department of Dance at the University of Utah in 1975 where she designed and taught an array of courses in Dance and Special Education, for majors and non-majors. An extremely gifted teacher, Professor Riordan has made a deep and lasting impression on her students. In recognition of her rare gifts as a teacher, Anne Riordan received the Distinguished Teaching Award from the University of Utah and a Utah Professor of the Year award from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. Her achievements as the director of Sunrise Dance Company and Sunrise Wheels have been equally impressive. She created forty-eight dances for these two companies and presented more than eighty performances throughout the United States and was invited to take her companies to Japan in China. Her work with persons with disabilities has been the subject of six documentary films and several major publications. Anne Riordan has published extensively in her field and is a much-demanded speaker at national conferences. She is the recipient of numerous awards including the National Dance Association Plaudit Award, a Presidential Scholar Award, and the Utah Dance Organization's Lifetime Contribution to the Field of Dance Award. A native of Salt Lake City, Anne Riordan is married to Michael P. Riordan and is the mother of three children.

A woman of remarkable courage, great zest and humor, Anne Riordan, like her dance, touches the spiritual core in each of us. Her life is a joyful celebration of the human spirit. The Madeleine Council is honored to name her the 2006 recipient of the Madeleine Award for Distinguished Service to the Arts and Humanities.
